

Bonelab avatars story idea

Ford wearing a crown gets information from one of his clones that the others were disposed of

After hearing the news king ford walks down the stairs everyone kneeling trying not to shake too much

Ford looks closer at him and sees blood dripping out of his head

Smiling he asks him to make it harder for people to join the army and to bring two powerful bodyguards

After that he said something in his ear and the ford clone ran away

Strong was rejected from the army even though he scored at least the minimum needed score to join

Yet he was simply told they needed a better army and that it was a strict order

Strong went to a broken down building surrounded by thick fog, bent rusted metal trash and Listening to the news on Tv while sniping on cans

Overhearing about King Ford's orders to make stronger soldiers after the clone cascade and the key to the room of the clock tower going missing

Strong turned off the TV trying to get back to practicing but never did he get any better

Remembering his rejection to the military shook his hands and threw off his aim shooting the only lit lantern instead

"I should get a new gun...

Who am I kidding"

He thought about the clock tower

With one blink his old home becoming rubble

Massacre and chaos

He snapped out of it took his gun and drove away

He went to the clock tower at afternoon placed his sniping gun on the window and looked through the scope looking at the clones before setting his eye to the door of the castle

He heard loud noises behind him, metal grinding and heavy foot steps vibrating the space he was in

There was no way down and the only room upstairs is locked

He shook and turned the gun at the door

Before realizing the sound wasn't coming from the stairway

It was climbing on the wall outside

By the time he turned around to face the window he was knocked back through the wooden door from a powerful force

He opened his eyes and saw a giant, a fat man with gold plated armor and a thin white mask grabbed a heavy metal box throwing it at strong

He just barely held it up but the man started bashing it down at him over and over and over

Behind strong was a wooden guardrail breaking the closer he got to it

When the last piece of the guardrail fell on the ground he went limp looking down as the shadow of the box hid him away

Until he was pushed back followed by noise of gunfire

“get up soldier we have stuff to do”

He opened his eyes and saw a girl with a black mask carrying handguns

And a cat running around the heavy making a distraction

The girl ran upstairs before he could even realize it

She went through the locked door seeing... nothing in the room

The heavy grabbed short about to bash him to the wall but strong... pathetically failed at shooting strong because of him shaking in his boots

However fast was able to jump on top of heavy shooting his head over and over letting short to run off and fast jumping off of heavy the second he tried catching her

Fast ran down grabbing him and short running out of the window and short using a crowbar sliding down the rope while fast continued shooting at heavy's face strong was breathing heavily losing his grasp

Strong: "I see why I was rejected"

Fast took hold of the crowbar and let strong carry short

Short" "hey don't feel that bad I'm sure you'll find someone some day"

Strong: "no not like THAT I was supposed to be a soOAH!"

Fast short and strong dropped off on a roof of a building

Fast: "this is fine we could find the bell somewhere else Ford could be hiding it outside of the castle... who am I kidding we can't get there again

... we should go to the hospital first give this soldier a cure for ptsd or whatever stops him from shooting in the sky”

Short: “Cut the kid a break he’s only... am... what’s your age?”

Strong: “I’m 20”

Short: “Exactly!”

Fast: “A soldier should be able to fight in the frontlines no matter the age”

Strong: “just like the corpses of people twice their age? Just like the people killed off in the first seconds of a war?! JUST LIKE THE 3000 PEOPLE WHO WERE KILLED FOR NO PURPOSE?!?”

There was dead silence

Strong couldn’t hold himself together, he was breathing heavily with veins popping out of his bald head

Until breathing in and out and calmly saying

Strong: “Cut me a break woman you have no idea what war is and how suddenly you can die no matter your skill or will to live

At this very second we could be sniped at and boom you'll never see your family again if they even exist"

Fast: "I might not but I know that experience helps... a lot"

otherwise I wouldn't be here

So I think you should get the opportunity I did"

"doing what shooting snipers in fear for my life? I don't think I can get any "experience" otherwise unless who you're fighting are walking tin cans"

Bonelab avatars story idea (as it was written before I failed to write it normally)

Arthur ford in another universe decides to be a king and for him work the heavy and the tall

An assassin aka fast and a thief aka short murdered his goons and stole his crown

And he's trying to bring them to him to behead them both

While strong will be the main character wanting to be a soldier in the military but was put down because of his downside of not being able to learn quickly and come up with a strategy that wouldn't blow up on his face

And when he found out that he actually could've gotten in the army (barely) if Ford didn't make it harder to get in the army because he wanted stronger goons on his side he decided to teach himself sniping and train

The only two things he's decent at

Fast and short would go up the clock tower to break it to make sure Ford and them are the only ones left in the simulation to make sure (at least in this timeline) that he dies with no help whatsoever

Strong gets to the clocktower to get a better distance and shoot Ford

But Heavy would be in the clocktower on patrol because Ford knew what they'd try

Obviously outmatched Strong would have no way out of that situation

The heavy would bash the metal heavy box on him multiple times and strong would start to give up numbing down and finally letting go of the box looking down in defeat

And that's when fast would come help for just long enough for strong to be pushed back by short letting fast to dash away from the box before it crushed her

Fast strong and short would run away from heavy and since he's so slow he'd have difficulty catching up but that was no mistake

Because the clocktower had no bell inside of it Ford already took that away and with heavy blocking the only other way out they'd be stuck there until Ford's troops show up and gun them down

But since there is no fall damage strong fast and short would be able to force heavy to punch one of the bricks so hard he breaks through it letting them to jump off and run away

Heavy after realizing he'd be replaced by tall if he didn't capture them "teams up" with the group because duh he's a heavy he can't even drive a car because it would break under his own weight he'd be far too slow

To get to ford with no way of getting rid of the goons they would need a helping hand

Strong knowing exactly that he will not be able to help the team as much as heavy and feeling like a weakling in the team of gods would exchange his nickname strong onto heavy and leave

Until light seeings as he looks depressed as all hell and super stoned would tell him that he does have a place in the team he's trying to get to he could be a middle ground between strong, fast and short and if he learnt new things and bettered himself by the help of others he'd even be able to do more for the team

Hearing this strong would offer her a place in the team and she decided to join but not to harm ford but to help strong get better at things other than what he's used to and when learning that other characters also have their own shortcomings tries to help all of them

Light would be like a flat arc character developing other characters like heavy who's duo would become perfect because heavy could throw her at great speeds because of her light weight and teaching heavy to be more outgoing letting him explain to short that nobody is there to replace him aka the stress that he's been trying to deal with when working for ford which only made his job harder to accomplish

Strong would get better at puzzles and creation the one thing ford excels at over all of them because short and light sneaked close enough to the castle to see the puzzles but had to leave because of the army of fords that arrived out of nowhere

Making strong a better leader and coordinating which character should do what to solve the puzzles that ford has in his castle to get to him

Heavy would change his mind about working for ford because of his strictness and forcing heavy to suffer for every failure instead of giving him a vacation for at least once in his life to let him become a pro wrestler which was his intended goal in life until ford baited him into working for him

I forgot to mention short's character and fast's considering they're the ones beginning all this

Fast would try avoiding every kind of emotional connection to everyone at all because when she was a child her emotions took control over her leading to her acting on impulse and killing bullies in her school which left her traumatized

Making her only think of the plan and goal even though her demeanor and excitement about her team becoming better versions of themselves and sassy attitude would sometimes break through

Ford would actually also beat her on that front being himself even in the middle of battle (until she develops by the help of her team express her true self and be herself when everything's calm and collected and take her job seriously when it's show time)

Ford for a double agent who became a king of his clones that had his mother murdered by his future self he sounds like a very human guy considering he says stuff like "whaddup son" so he wouldn't take the fight seriously enough trying to hide his weakness of grief and rage by trying to be his positive self

So Ford would show a lack of seriousness by being too much of himself while fast would know when to be herself and when to take things seriously

Also Ford became the king because of his traumatic memory of his future self killing his mom making himself think it would be for the best he stays away from the void because he could become the murderer

Tall would be a force of nature devoid of any kind of humanity

With his oversized scythe and inhuman screams of agony coming from his helmet he'd be someone everyone would fear especially heavy because he knows the most what tall is able to do

When light would die to him strong would get mad but since fast taught him that being impulsive and listening to your emotions wouldn't end well before he'd calm himself down and get back in the fight saving both heavy and fast by jumping onto the head of the knight while heavy holds his scythe short scratches and bites the tall's fingers and fast runs at tall's feet at full force the knight drops and strong opens his helmet just wide enough to see his eyes push his shot gun into the helmet and blow his head off

After the death of tall they'd take a moment of silence to grief her death and go onto fight real Ford who'd have a lot of meticulously constructed weapons at his disposal like heavy box shooting cannons and a machine that he can let him warp his body into anyone he wants at the cost of having only a few options and those avatars being good at only one thing each like speed smarts and strength

While strong took advantage to all of their weaknesses because of him being the master of none

I might have botched some things that's canonical in the boneworks/lab universes but I am really happy but I am really happy with how the story turned out

Other than a lack of personality for heavy, short and strong I still need to think about those

So what do you think

New ideas for the story

Strong would actually want to go to the war not to be a hero or because he cares about his country but he cares about people IN his country

Especially people who are willing to waste away their lives in the chaos of war where the likely chance of their survival comes down to luck over everything else

When he was a child he was taught that people should die for the country and that it was heroic and that training would let them survive

Then he learnt the truth

In the final minutes of world war 1

3000 people died just because the generals delayed the end of the war to be “poetically timed” at 11th hour of 11th day of 11th month

Those 6 hours before the war ended people suffered thousands of deaths thousands of people unable to see their parents or their wives and children just because of the morons that thought of the victims of war as walking meat

many people lured into hell and killed off for nothing

Strong thought he could at least control the chaos just enough to at least save one person

Giving someone else a chance to live to make himself believe that life can't be wasted away that it can't just end like that that it's not useless to go to a war to defend his home

Being proven wrong close to the end of the story when light an innocent girl trying to make the world a better place would get cut in half and ripped apart the second tall entered the frame

I failed at showing how strong wasn't able to shoot well In to

Strong wouldn't be saved

He'd wake up with broken bones helped by short and fast just because of how miserable he looked

And since he wouldn't be able to train physically he'd be forced to only train his mind

And rarely train using guns that don't need too much stability like the sniper that he's used to

Before going under ground to test those weapons on living beings aka null bodies to make sure he doesn't feel sorry for their deaths

If he wants to be a sniper gosh darn it he needs to be cold

Until they'd go underground to fight null bodies drinking melon belly which is when strong would regenerate by killing one of them and learning how to safely use rocket jumping

Since he regenerates when he kills someone that means if he had anyone underneath him get hit by the rocket he would regenerate while also getting the thrust that the explosion gives him

Which will be an easier way of going through an army of fords instead of fighting all of them

And clipping the tip of the rocket into the gun to reload faster

Obviously heavy would still have to fight most of them because he's too heavy to get high in the air